It is auction yesterday, by Mr. Armstrong, and possible, however, that we may be attaching too much importance to the matter, judging of it as we can only do in the absence of any reliable information as to the actual facts from our own standard. In any foreign country an indignity would certainly not be offered to an important public functionary, especially a momber of the reigning family, without some very good cause; but in China a very different state of things may possibly prevail. Many movements such as that under consideration are really the result only disagreement among the great people around the Dragon Throne may be sufficient to cause degradations or exaltations which, to the portant political considerations. Some acts, such as for example some years ago that of receiving into favour a celebrated old Mandarin of the name of Wo-sen, bave been found after a time by those able to obtain tolerably reliable information, to have had no more important origin. Old Wo-JEN, who Bas died since the time we speak of, was a conservative of the old school, and was known contrary to general speculation, his restoration to favour did not have any noticeable is the fact, the action of the Emperor will not appear in so unaccountably a capricious light as upon the supposition that political motives were at the bottom of the step taken. This has repeatedly been a strong subject of complaint in Hongkong, and upon precisely the grounds which the Spectator sees apply against the system generally. Hongkong happens to be favoured by being hours' imprisonment, and to receive ten strokes selected as a suitable station for a regiment to be in readiness in case anything should arise in China calling for their services. The soldiers are no more wanted for Hougkong than for Canton, Foochow or Shanghai, but this place happening to rejoice in being a British Colony is the only spot in these quarters on which the regiment may be stationed. In a political point of view, the Colony has only a partial interest in the regiment. It would no doubt be scarcely safe [fendant passing, and having to be a loier of for Hongkong, in common with the other places where British subjects are resident. to be without any troops within a reasonable distance—but the safety we derive from them is only from the moral effect which is produced upon China generally by this standing reminder that we are prepared to defend ourselves if necessary. In this respect the treaty ports derive actually more benefit from the troops than Hougkong does; as we have here a large Police Force, and are Yow-mab-tee, during the late typhoon. not in any way dependent upon the Chinese officials for the maintenance of order; whereas at the ports it is only by a strong conviction on the part of the native officials that if HALL& HOLTZ and KELLY they do not afford some kind of protection to shout two hours, and recovered from the junk thought, and was it not the case that one fo-Yokohama Messrs. Britain in China that is involved in the question-and yet, while the unlucky little Military Contribution of twenty thousand pounds annually, the ports do not contribute a farthing. This palpable injustice has been the subject of much complaint, and it is clear that any attempt to raise a naval contribution from the Colonies would be still more amenable to this charge of injustice, as the forces would be the means of generally carrying but the foreign policy of Great Britain, and would rarely be applied to further the It is somewhat annoying for those who have special advantage of the Colonies which conindulged in a variety of speculations as to the tributed the amounts. FIRES IN THE COLONY. TO THE EDITOR OF THE "DAILY PRESS." SIR .- In your yesterday's issue, regarding a fire having broken out in Webster's Bazaar, you say, "No alarm bell was rang at the Cenral Station." Why should it have been rung Surely you don't think a fire taking place in a densely-housed place like a Chinese Bazaar, is "apecially necessary" case. The Government widently think not, but the cost of ringing the bell fixed on such a commanding part of the Colony, cannot be much, and the bell, I am sure, will not object-on the store of dignityto be rung, if by its means, belp can be co lected to save property from fire. After the typhoon great difficulty was experienced in removing the dead bodies which came ashore in all directions. The destruction of life: in native graft vastly outcumbers anything that has occurred before. In ordinary typhoons the places of shelter which the Chinese, who have a mavellous instinct in foreseeing the advent of these terrible vicitations, seek, are sufficient to protect the large bulk of the junks and sampans.
